

Resiliency Center

Supporting Staff through Adverse Events

The Resiliency Center takes a three-tiered approach to supporting staff who have experienced stress injury from adverse events.

1 Local Peer Support

We teach staff about peer support fundamentals and resources through presentations and trainings so they can maintain a general understanding of how to support others through adverse events.

To schedule a presentation, contact resiliencycenter@hsc.utah.edu.

2 Peer Responders

The Peer Support Program provides institutional-level support to U of U Health employees during, or after adverse clinical events and stressful situations. It consists of a diverse network of U of U Health professionals who are trained as Peer Responders.

See sidebar for information on how to activate.

3 Expedited Referral Network

This is a collection of resources, including the Resiliency Center, Employee Assistance Program, and Psychiatry, that provides streamlined access to care for those needing additional support.

See next page for a list of resources.

The Peer Support Program is activated via contacting Dr. Jake Van Epps directly at jake.vanepps@utah.edu or the Resiliency Center at resiliencycenter@hsc.utah.edu or 801-213-3403.

Once the program is activated, a Peer Responder reaches out to you to talk via phone or in-person. These conversations are private and confidential. They are designed to be helpful but are not a substitute for mental health services.

If you are concerned about yourself or your colleague, please contact the Peer Support Program.
