

Coping with Emotional Stress: Some Practical, Common-Sense Suggestions That Work

It's normal.....

- Remember, you are having normal human reactions, just like others under similar stress. You are not going “crazy” or having a nervous breakdown.
- Give yourself permission to feel bad. Like the flu, emotional stress has to run its course.
- Physically you may feel fatigued or have difficulty sleeping, notice changes in your appetite, or feel “on edge.”
- It may be difficult to concentrate or make decisions. You may have unwanted thoughts or find yourself not able to think about anything other than the incident.
- Emotionally you may feel fear, guilt, anxiety, depression, anger, or helpless. You may also feel numb or spaced out.
- These reactions will decrease over time and in most ways, they are adaptive and healing.

Stay in touch with others.

- Don't isolate yourself.
- Talk it out with people. Talk is a very healing medicine.
- Allow supportive people to assist you.
- Reach out to people who care – family, friends, clergy, counselors.

Stay active.

- Maintain a normal, active and productive schedule, but modify as necessary.
- Physical exercise (within your normal limits) is one of the best ways to reduce stress.
- Do something that you enjoy.

Help others. (It will help you too).

- Realize that those around you are also under stress.
- Assist family members, friends and colleagues who are experiencing stress.

Take care of yourself.

- Exercise (within your limits) to burn away stress chemicals in your body.
- Where possible avoid added stressful situations. This is not the time to take on extra.
- Have some relaxing times.
- Don't abuse alcohol or drugs. This can hinder and delay recovery.
- Eat well-balanced, regular meals (even if you don't feel like it).
- Prioritize sleep as much as you can; remember that sleep disturbance is common, too.
- Avoid hazardous activities – there is an increased likelihood of accidents.
- Delay making major life decisions until your stress level lowers. Symptoms will decrease significantly.
